Len Bai's new portal site is developed based on Joomla which provides a fabulous open source framework and content publishing system.

Having thinking about upgrading my site for nearly one and half months, finally I carried out the work by adopting the Joomla system instead of the previous weblog platform provided by Serendipity.

Looking back to my personal website development roadmap, I am very pleased by seeing the fast changing development technologies and business models in the IT industry and quite enjoy the operational convenience released by the advanced technology breakthroughs.
